During 11-hour period (1200-2259), received 216 phone calls from mostly Kuwaiti citizens (and a few residents from other Arab countries) expressing their support for the United States and the American military campaign in Iraq. Callers said they received messages on their cellular phones or from friends telling them to call the American and British Embassies to express their support. Several callers said that a pro-US march had been planned in Kuwait but then cancelled for security reasons, and that the phone calls were an alternate way to show their support for the United States and to pay their condolences for American servicemen killed in action. Every call received was positive.
